ANNUAL MEET OF ZONE 7 S. O.

A meeting of Social Credit Zone No. 7 was held in the Champion United church on Sunday evening, December 6th. Rev. Peter Dawson, M. L. A. was present, also representatives from most of the groups which comprise the zone. After a meeting of the minutes of last meeting, election of Officers for the ensuing year, was in order. The president and vice-president were elected by acclamation, viz. Al Miller for zone head, S. W. Caldwell of K. K. Keadly group, vice president.

James Chamberlin was elected secretary-treasurer. Resolutions committee—Al Miller, Glenford Porel and D. Chamberlin. The following delegates were appointed to attend the Annual Constituency Convention held in Vulcan on Wednesday, Dec. 8th: Al Miller and Harry McLaughlin, Bonson group; Joe Rhodes, Sanderson group; S. W. Caldwell, Kirkcaldy group; D. Chamberlin and Mrs. Chamberlin, Champion group. A vote of thanks was tendered to retiring officers for their work during the past year. The Resolutions Committee have notice of resolutions they were preparing to submit to the forthcoming Convention, on "The Port played by Groups in the financing of By-Elections" and "Improved Radio Broadcasting of Social Credit propaganda." The retiring president, H. E. Tisdal referred to the recent By-Election in Lethbridge, and was no great cause for discouragement, in the result, but urged members not to slacken up in their endeavors to bring about the desired changes. Rev. Peter Dawson, M. L. A. gave some interesting and enlightening facts and figures connected with various Government Departments, he also spoke briefly on side-lights of the recent By-Election campaign in Lethbridge, in which he took part.

Need Is Great

As the eighth year of economic and agricultural depression for a substantial area of the Western Canadian prairie provinces moves towards its close the need for the Federal government to assume full financial, if not administrative, responsibility for relief in all its phases, including medical and hospital costs and administration charges becomes more imperative, and not only in the rural districts but in the urban centres as well.

Under the relief act up to $100 exists to-day in Alberta and Saskatchewan the Federal government has assumed full financial responsibility for direct relief in what is known as the Federal drought area, comprising a substantial area of municipal units and unorganized territories together with the towns and villages contained in those areas. The provincial governments are required along with the municipalities to bear hospital and medical costs in the Federal drought area and in addition the provincial governments must match the Federal monthly grants in a dollar for dollar, at a joint contribution towards direct relief expenditures in rural and urban municipalities outside the drought area.

The Federal contribution to the drought area is an outright gift, not to be repaid and is accompanied by the thought that neither the gift nor a portion of it may be worked out.

Thus, within the Federal drought area the provincial governments and municipalities still have to bear the considerable cost of medical care and hospitalization and outside the drought area the municipalities, urban and rural, continue to carry a percentage of direct relief expenditures, the costs of medical and hospital care and administration charges.

Relief Deaths Bearing

While it is true that the larger urban centres to-day are carrying a smaller percentage of direct relief expenditures, at the same time the accumulated burden of overhead from borrowings to provide for their share of direct relief expenditures in past years has been rapidly mounting during a period when there was no market for their securities and to-day the credit of many of the cities is threatened with collapse, at a time when the full burden cannot be passed on to a decreasing number of solvent taxpayers whose earnings are declining.

Furthermore, it must be remembered that the plight of these cities has been accentuated in recent years by the necessity of taking care of an influx of rural population who have established residence for a sufficient length of time to qualify for city relief.

Faced with this situation it is not surprising that the demand from the governing bodies of cities in both Alberta and Saskatchewan to be relieved of this burden is becoming more vociferous and that in Alberta, at least, the cities' demands are accompanied by a threat to cut off relief on a date to be named unless further assistance is forthcoming from the senior government. Conferences of the mayors of Saskatchewan cities have been called with prospects that a similar situation may be issued.

Must Go To Ottawa

If the cities are in earnest and demonstrate that there is something more than moral suasion in their intentions to set a relief cut-off date and will carry them out it is quite predictable that the provincial governments will have to lay the unwanted child on the Ottawa doorstep for the provinces are in no better financial position to carry the burden than the municipalities themselves.

With the end of the financial trial in sight for the cities and the provinces the need for greater Federal assistance has become very great, but even greater is the need that assistance take the form of work in place of donations or loans in kind, and, wherever it may be feasible and to the maximum possible extent, in the interests of the recipients and the taxpayers alike, and more particularly should this form of assistance be made applicable to relief in the urban centres.

Work Is First Consideration

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Alberta cities made the provision of work one of two alternatives submitted to government authorities when they asked for relief from the load they are carrying, "either by providing sufficient government-financed works to reduce relief rolls to a minimum or by assuming the entire responsibility for the administration of unemployment relief."

Even if the Federal government should assume responsibility for the administration of unemployment relief the necessity for providing it in the form of work is still just as great as under relief fully financed by the government and administered by the municipality, not only from the viewpoint of the taxpayer but also because of the moral as well as economic benefits to the relief recipient.

Taxpayers are tired of seeing millions spent without any return and a large percentage of relief recipients would infinitely prefer an independent means of support to gifts.

B.C. Government Program

Would Extend Northern Boundaries To The Yukon

Premier Pattullo outlined for the British Columbia legislature a 26-point program of government objectives designed to make the province "a beehive of industry and development, with economic and social security from the 49th parallel to its northern boundary, and from Alaska to the Pacific ocean, with our people happy and prosperous."

Among the 26 objectives enumerated by the premier in his speech winding up the budget debate were these:

Maintenance of Empire tariff preference for the benefit of the province's primary industries and at the same time expansion of the province's business with the United States and other countries.

Bringing about construction of a highway through British Columbia and the Yukon.

Extending British Columbia's boundaries "not only to take in the Yukon territory but also the territory east of the Yukon following the 120th meridian to the North Pole, which would add 400,000 square miles to British Columbia's 385,000."

Establishment of transportation facilities with the Peace River country and northern British Columbia as soon as possible.

Linking of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway—extending now from the head of Howe Sound about 300 miles to Queen's City—with Canada's two national railway systems.

Co-operation with the Dominion to the end that all unemployed and temporarily unemployed able to work may be able to sustain themselves in reasonable comfort.

Others included improvement of the financial position of municipalities, establishment of better understanding between employers and employees, improvement of labor conditions and improvement through legislation and administration of "the health conditions of our people."

Premier Pattullo's proposal to extend the boundaries of British Columbia to the North Pole would bring into the greater part of two Arctic islands and a vast expanse of ice within the provincial borders.

Extension of the provincial eastern boundary along the 120th meridian to the Pole would bring about two-thirds of Bala Island in the Beaufort sea and about half of Prince Patrick Island into British Columbia.

Many Priceless Volumes

China's Interest in Bible Was Evident in Exhibition

An exhibition of Bibles in Peking this year evidenced China's interest in the Christian Scriptures. There were 300 entries, representing 60 different denominations and 12 were Chinese. Among the Bibles were some of a costly character, and others of priceless historical value.

The volumes were lent by libraries, universities, individuals and various mission groups. The British and Foreign Bible Society lent the famous Morrison Bible of 1823 and the Morrison New Testament of that same date printed from wood blocks made 10 years earlier. There was also the first Protestant Chinese version to be published.

No volume, however, attracted as much attention as the Morrison Bible loaned by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek—the one he used during his imprisonment at the time of the Sian revolt in December, 1936.

The meat of the Byrd South Polar expedition had to be thawed out for two days before it could be cooked. So solidly was it frozen that it would splinter if dropped.

FLIN FLON

"The Story of Its Finding and Position To-day"

By PRATT KURN

(Ed. Note: We are indebted to R. F. Tompkins, Toronto, author of "Nine Finders" for so much historical material used in the first part of this story.)

There are some things you want to do and seemingly never arrive at the point where they are possible of accomplishment. My visit to Flin Flon was one thing I did indeed look forward to for years, yet my visit in 1937 was the first time I got there.

While living in Winnipeg from 1916 to 1923, during some years of which I was on the publicity committee of the Flin Flon project, Flin Flon intrigued me—coming East for the big developments under the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. took place it was impossible to get back—this year I "made it" and was fully repaid for the effort in going west from Toronto.

In a virgin forest on the banks of a lake was where Tom Creighton found this mine—today you would not recognize the spot. However, let's start at the beginning because it is going to be a long story and let's be told the story of the first gold discovery in Manitoba, 50 years ago, to the present Flin Flon project.

1,500 ton daily and of a town of 7,000 built on solid rock in seven years.

The Trail To Flin Flon

In 1881 gold was discovered on the Winnipeg River near its mouth in 1880. These early discoveries failed to stir interest in gold mining in Manitoba. The first claims were staked on the Winnipeg River in 1881.

Major A. E. Pelletier, a French-Canadian, was a prospector in 1911, read as Inspector of the R.C.M.P. to prospect for gold. He, with his partner, Jack Spence, were at Big Rice Lake, where they found a trace of gold. Though the area was covered with snow it appealed to him, so he came back in May, 1911, with two men, Trovost, another Indian. They dug their camp. It was a few days later the fire had thawed the snow and the men had dug the rocks. He named the find Gabriel (after his best girl in Quebec). Staked his claim he called it the Gabriel claim. After his second best girl, then, he named the intervening claim, and named it San Antonio after his pal.

From 1917 to 1927 small mines were operated for short periods with indifferent success in Manitoba.

In 1927 the Central Manitoba Mines started prospecting in the area. It was the first time since 1917 that small mines were operated for short periods with indifferent success in Manitoba.

Linking of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway—extending now from the head of Howe Sound about 300 miles to Queen's City—with Canada's two national railway systems.

Co-operation with the Dominion to the end that all unemployed and temporarily unemployed able to work may be able to sustain themselves in reasonable comfort.

Others included improvement of the financial position of municipalities, establishment of better understanding between employers and employees, improvement of labor conditions and improvement through legislation and administration of "the health conditions of our people."

A goose has about 12,000 muscles under the skin that do nothing but control the action of the feathers.

This is Tom Creighton in 1937—the man who found the Flin Flon mine in 1915.

ately after the free-trading French. A year later, Joseph Prosser and his brother, Alexander Henry, wintered at Amisk Lake, while in 1394 David Thompson mapped its geographical features.

But it was far, not minerals, that interested the pioneers, and it remained for a prospector to inadvertently guide a prospector to Manitoba's biggest mine.

In 1905, when the Hudson Bay Railway was rushing northeast over the muddy toward Hudson Bay, the trailing party at The Pas received fresh claims in the area of Creighton Lake. The first, if desultory prospecting of the area, may be credited to Canadian Tompkins, Ltd., which had real estate interest in The Pas, and which sent out a party of prospectors comprising Hugh Vickers, Creighton, John and Dan Mosher and Dion, who prospectured around Amisk, or Beaver Lake, just across the inter-provincial boundary from the present site of Flin Flon.

Early in the spring of 1913, before the break-up, some citizens of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, grubstaked Creighton, John and Dan Mosher and Dion, who prospectured around Amisk, or Beaver Lake, just across the inter-provincial boundary from the present site of Flin Flon. In September of that year, they staked the first Flin Flon claim on the shores of Beaver Lake, the first gold discovery in the area.

The first engine to examine and sample their find was John Alex, a native of Halifax and a graduate of Queen's University, who was acting for his principal, the Canadian Mining and Exploration Co. ### Win Five Scholarships

Record Made In One Year By "The Girl Next Door"

Winners of five scholarships valued at $2,750 during the past year, Annie MacPherson had the place of honor in the 11th annual competition of the East York Collegiate in Toronto. She graduated from the school last year.

Award won by the student regule the first Edward Blake scholarship valued at $425 for courses at the University of Toronto; the Angus annual memorial scholarship, $600; the Alkensk scholarship, $625; class of 1911 scholarship, $650; and the second Alkensk scholarship, $625, at Victoria College, University of Toronto.

At the commencement she was given prizes for the best essay and the best story written during the school year. She was her class valedictorian.

An Unusual Experience

Man Nearly Lost Life Swimming In Shaking Land

A man was swimming in a mountain lake in Jamaica. He glanced at the shore, where he saw his clothes. They seemed to have been moved a considerable distance up the mountain-side.

Then he saw his clothes, which were not the clothes that had moved, but the lake. It was shaking violently as he swam in it.

He reached the shore only just in time. A few minutes later the last splat of water disappeared through a hole in the mountain through which he would have been sucked to death.

At one time, the penalty was more severe for killing a stag than for killing a human being in England.

MINCE MEAT PATTIES
FOR HOLIDAY SEASON
The holiday call for parties and good times, particularly when the young folks are home from work and school. Refreshments are of an important consideration and there are many ways of serving them. Mince meat patties are a good one for the holiday menu.

Accented patties add to the success of any party. In fact, many a party has been saved by a patty at twelve different times, during the holiday season. Refreshments make for a happy month during the holiday season. Whether that theory is correct is difficult to say, but it is all agreeing that Mince Meat Patties are a good one for the holiday menu.

"If I may say so," Captain Duff-Hooper said, "that is not a particularly strong reason for involving yourself in his financial affairs."

"Possibly not," admitted the Earl, "but I liked old Gerald. He made me feel superior. Perhaps I did make a mistake—but I made it. At any rate," he added, triumphantly, "I wasn't so big a fool as the fellows who advanced a noodle like Gerald thirty thousand pounds."

The Earl looked rather less like an earl than a man who had come to do the piano and rather more like a strawberry-dipped in whipped cream than either; for his round, ruddy face was a rich, ripe red, and his ruff of hair was as white as a powdered dove. He was a small, stout man who looked as if at any moment his baggy old suit of dun-colored shawl would swallow him up.

"We are here," began the Earl, in the formal public tone which he adopted when presiding at a cat show, "to consider a most important matter. I asked you, Elaine, to attend what we may call a family council because you've got a head on your shoulders."

Duff-Hooper acknowledged the compliment with a nod like an emperor at a grub.

"And," continued the Earl of Bingley, "because you are, that is, you may be, a member, so to speak, of the family, if you know what I mean."

His voice trailed off.

"I know what you mean, father," said the girl who was the third member of the conference. She was an orchard owner and olive oil purveyor. But keep cupid out of this. You can hardly expect Elaine to bother about romance till the hunting season is over."

"Oh, I say now," protested the general, "that's a bit thick, what?"

"We're waiting for the gruesome details," the girl said, addressing the Earl.

"Of course I shouldn't go round signing things," said the Earl, "I really shouldn't, you know. Most inconvenient habit of mine, it is, really. Why, only the other day a chap swooned down on me whilst I was walking the begonia and the rose. I knew what I was about. I'd signed an order for a washing machine—on twelve easy installments. What I said was with the beauty thing I can't think. I've always washed myself."

"Father, please!" said the girl. "We're here on a perfect day for riding—because you said the situation is serious. So please try not to waffle."

"Certainly, Rosa. Certainly," said the Earl. "No waffling. But I really must tell you how I signed a cheque to a magazine just to oblige a chap who said he was working his way through Cambridge. I remember thinking at the time that he certainly did need an education and I hoped it was not too late for him to acquire one. He was a fat fellow and had false teeth that clicked at me. It developed that the magazine was devoted to tailoring."

"You are pressing you have to laugh."

"He said, 'I do not tail!'"

"You are pressing you have to laugh. Those notes, aren't they?" asked his daughter.

"What did he say?"

"He was distinctly down," replied the Earl. "Heaven sent old Mac so Scotch in forty years. I dropped a hint that what with taxes and so forth, I hadn't a spare bean. Of course, as my solicitor, he knew that already."

"Did he say they had any legal right to take over Bingley?"

"I regret to report he did. He advised me to pay."

"Did he say with what?"

"Well, no, he didn't," said the Earl. "I brought up the point, and he dropped out a lot of legal language about liens and rates and so forth which I can run up by saying that the estate is in one devil of a pickle."

"As a last resort we could go to our friends," commenced Lady Rosa.

"I told you that idea myself," said the Earl. "Wandered into the House of Lords and hadn't gone five years when two peers asked me for a loan of a few quid before I could ask them for a loan of a thousand. Ran into Bumpy Beedlington, and he looked more like a scarecrow than a duke. Patches in his pants. His country seats he calls them. Says that when his land goes for trousers worn out he'll have to wear the family armor. So we're all in the same hole of soap."

"What I could help," put in Captain Duff-Hooper. "Sorry but can't. Can hardly help my nags as it is. I'll be getting their oats with their shorn."

"Thanks, old boy. Good of you, I'm sure," said the Earl. "Why, Rosa, you're crying! What's wrong?"

"Wrong?" Rosa sobbed. "How can you ask that? We're going to lose the home we love, the place where I was born, and you were

"Tattling," muttered the Earl, aggressively. "Fancy!"

"You can't meet them, isn't that so?"

"I thought, from what he said, it was tattling," said the Earl. "Now that I could be interested in. But tattling! I ask you!"

"How much money must you have instantly?"

"A good bit."

"Please concentrate, father. How much exactly?"

"One thousand and two pounds," said the Earl.

"If you can't pay, then what?"

"I'll be unpleasant," replied the Earl. "Last week I had a letter from those interested Johnnies in London. They took a rather gloomy view of the matter."

"May I see that letter?"

"I'm very much afraid I used it to light my pipe," admitted the Earl. "Hunted him and low for a match, but no match, and so—"

"Surely you remember what the letter said?"

"All too well. It said they would take steps."

"What steps?"

"That being out of here, bag and baggage," said the Earl.

"You can't mean they'll take Bingley from us, can you?"

"So they intimated in what I believe are called no uncertain terms."

"But they couldn't. They wouldn't do anything so drastic," said Rosa.

"Oh, you don't know those henchmen."

"I don't know them," said the Earl. "They're exceedingly drastic but when they've caught a bending. When they say they'll take steps, they'll take steps, you may depend upon it. Take steps! What a droll way to put it!"

"But they have no claim on the estate."

"The regrettable fact is, they have," said the Earl.

"How could they have?" asked Duff-Hooper. "In an endeavor to demonstrate that he really did have a head on his narrow shoulders."

"When I was trying to get Gerald out of his papers," the Earl said, "I got into a bit of a row."

"So forth and so forth, and I did get some papers," the Earl said.

"Oh, rather?"

"It's no use, my dear, moaning 'Oh, father and looking tragic,' and the Earl, 'I did what I did. You could hardly expect me to foresee that poor Gerald would try to take that high wall out of crumby marks of his. Always told him she'd never make a jumper. Weak hooks. The old buffer had lived he'd have paid me back when he came into a little. But he would try to jump that absurd mare—"

"Father," interrupted Lady Rosa, "what are we to do?"

"I just wish I knew," said the Earl.

"We're in real danger of losing Bingley, our home, our family home, to some generations."

"I don't know what to do," said the Earl. "I did what I did. You could hardly expect me to foresee that poor Gerald would try to take that high wall out of crumby marks of his. Always told him she'd never make a jumper. Weak hooks. The old buffer had lived he'd have paid me back when he came into a little. But he would try to jump that absurd mare—"

"When?"

"They mentioned something about the year of the jubilee."

"That gives us six weeks to raise the thousand pounds," she said. "Can we?"

"At an earthly," said the Earl. "Yesterday when I was up in town I talked to MacKintosh."

"What did he say?"

"He was distinctly down," replied the Earl. "Heaven sent old Mac so Scotch in forty years. I dropped a hint that what with taxes and so forth, I hadn't a spare bean. Of course, as my solicitor, he knew that already."

"Did he say they had any legal right to take over Bingley?"

"I regret to report he did. He advised me to pay."

"Did he say with what?"

"Well, no, he didn't," said the Earl. "I brought up the point, and he dropped out a lot of legal language about liens and rates and so forth which I can run up by saying that the estate is in one devil of a pickle."

"As a last resort we could go to our friends," commenced Lady Rosa.

"I told you that idea myself," said the Earl. "Wandered into the House of Lords and hadn't gone five years when two peers asked me for a loan of a few quid before I could ask them for a loan of a thousand. Ran into Bumpy Beedlington, and he looked more like a scarecrow than a duke. Patches in his pants. His country seats he calls them. "Thanks, old boy. Good of you, I'm sure," said the Earl. "Why, Rosa, you're crying! What's wrong?"

"Wrong?" Rosa sobbed. "How can you ask that? We're going to lose the home we love, the place where I was born, and you were born, and where all the Bingleys have been born and lived. We're going to be turned out to make room for a pack of strangers, maybe nasty, stupid vulgarities who will have no respect for it and its traditions and all the beautiful things it has, isn't that something to cry about?"

"My dear child," said the Earl of Bingley, gently, "don't think I haven't indulged in a spot of private bawling myself. I'm older than you are, and I know how to cry. I'm sorry I naturally would be, wouldn't I?—and all my memories are bound up in Bingley. I was born here, played here as a boy, was married here, and lived here all my days, and I expected to die here."

The Earl blew his nose, and went on.

"I'd rather have them cut my heart out and eat it on toast than let Bingley get out of the family. However, tears are not typography bits or I'd bowl from now till Doomsday. Let's not give up hope, Rosa. Let's remember who we are and face it. So turn off the tap, there's a dear."

Rosa dried her eyes.

"You're right, father," she said. "I'm sorry I went away on you. You know you love every stone and beam and flower as much as I do. I know you're just not letting life get you down."

"Yes, she came over and kissed him on his strawberry brow."

"Talking of brows," said the Earl, "there is a ray."

"Really? What?" asked Rosa, eagerly.

"Well, it doesn't exactly dazzle one, but the Earl, "It's a darned match in a swamp. In this morning's post I received a letter from old MacKintosh."

"Read it to us, please, father."

"Gladly," said the Earl. He fished in his pockets and pulled out a packet of letters. "Many of them are sad and dog-ared."

"He opened one and read."

"Honored sir:—"

"If I'm troubling you, let me get rid of this mail, reasonable."

Montague Phipps, Batchelor, P.S. Also rats, mice, moles, toads, beetles, etc."

"That's not it," concluded the Earl. "Wonder why I kept this. Bats don't come in the night."

He tossed the batchelor's epistle on the fire, opened the next letter and read.

Belgian Lady Spending Winter 200 Miles North Of The Pas

Anne Gulgott de Mischeghen, writer and traveler, left The Pas, Man., recently bound north to Granville Lake to spend the winter. She is a baroness, and a palatial house, the Chateau de Mischeghen in Belgium, but the simple life in the north attracts her.

The baroness is writing a travel book based on life in the north. She has written two along similar lines.

She has a party of horses to have her third completed this spring. The work will be done in her lonely cabin, 200 miles north of The Pas.

A tour of Africa was added recently to her lengthy jaunts across the globe. She crossed the Sahara Desert by automobile and during hunting expeditions in Africa's wild, bagged a water buffalo, lions, antelopes and other game.

The north drew her in 1931 and she staked several mining claims on reaching Manitoba. Then she explored Granville Lake and the winter of 1931 saw her busy trapping.

Usually the trip to the cabin is made by dog team in winter, and canoe in the summer, but this year a plane took her to Granville Lake and months of study and writing.

Indian Lost On Reservation Followed Electric Line Into Village

Earl Beauregard, 18-year-old Chippewa Indian, was lost 20 hours in the wilds of the Bad River Indian reservation near Ashland, Wisconsin.

Earl took the mossy side of the trees or tell the direction by the stars, sent up smoke signals or rely on the red man's wood lore to get his bearings?

Earl did not. He merely looked for the white man's electric power lines and followed it into the village.

He didn't need men with new ideas as much as we need men who will put energy behind the old ideas that are practical.

Tobacco Marketing Co-operation

Canada Growers Realized Profits In Excess of $100 Per Acre

This Year

Since, Ontario—With the final curtain run down on the 1937 tobacco market, growers of Canada's sweet large agricultural crop were able to reckon their profits in excess of $100 per acre.

The year's market, which saw 56 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco mapped up by buyers in less than nine months, realized in excess of five million pounds for the 1700 producers who this spring planted 55,500 acres to the crop. Available figures show that tobacco produced a return of approximately $300 per acre.

Chief problem until 1934 was marketing. Today Ontario's flue-cured tobacco belongs to a marketing association which rigidly controls price and acreage. Each dealer, with the co-operation of the prospective growers of the crop, has a tobacco production is "budgeted" and the plan is done purely on a basis of the available market for that year's crop, taking into consideration, of course, the export prospect.

The growers who comprise the association are allotted certain acreage to plant to tobacco.

Representatives of growers and buyers, as well as the marketing association, meet and agree on an average minimum price for the crop. In 1937, for instance, the average minimum was set at 25 cents per pound. The price actually paid was 26 cents. This year the average minimum was 24½ cents and the price paid was probably around 27 cents.

With the co-operation of the farmer and the buyer, a crop of 56 million pounds was moved this year at a price which set a new high record for returns.

The tobacco industry has proved a fruitful field for labor agitators. During the harvest season in August, the "harvest strike" was called when farmers succeeded in obtaining higher wages for their labor.

Students and unemployed youths and men from nearby cities who were willing to work for three dollars a week per day. When the market opened, another group of agitators, known in organizing 2000 of the 1700 land-owners and temporarily delaying the market.

The agitation collapsed for lack of support among the representative section of the industry.

Today the tobacco industry is unique in the United States. The American continent in that grows tobacco is the only one in the world months ahead of time, amicably agree upon a fixed price which permits a substantial profit to all branches, and work hand in hand for future expansion.

Scholarship For Alberta Goes To Ralph E. Collins

Award of the 1937 Rhodes scholarship for Alberta to Ralph E. Collins, now a student at University of California in Berkeley, was announced at Edmonton.

Second graduate to receive the Alberta award, usually granted to an undergraduate student, Mr. Collins, 25-year-old son of a Chinese missionary, was an honors student in English, receiving a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Alberta in 1935 and the masters degree in 1936.

Robert Lloyd Cheney of Calgary was the only other graduate to win the award, being chosen in 1935.

Born in China, Mr. Collins is the son of the late P. B. Collins. His mother was the wife of Rev. W. T. Haggitt, pastor of the United church at Jasper, Alta.

Little Helps For This Week

If ye endure chastening, God deals with you as with sons.

James 5:11.

Trade trust, and will benefit. But with humble faith to see. Love inscribed upon them all. This is happiness to me.

Do not afraid of those trials which God may see fit to send upon you. It is with the wind and storm of tribulation that He separates the true wheat from the chaff. Always remember that He comes to you in your sorrows as well as in your joys. He lays low and He builds up. You will find yourself far from perfection if you do not find God in everything. He has provided a sweet and quiet life for his children, could they improve and use it, a calm and firm conviction. In all the storms and troubles that are about them however, things go, and they may find content and be careful for nothing, but—everything goes thanks.

Miss Jean Bins enjoyed the week end at the home of her parents in Calgary.

Neil Oatts returned from Rockford, Ill., last Friday, where he has been working for the last two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell McKay, of Calgary, were week end guests at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McKay.

On Friday, December 10th, a dance will be held at Bow Valley school, when the blanket will be drawn for. The proceeds will go towards the Christmas tree.

Rev. H. G. Smith and Ray Teskey attended the Presbytery meeting at Staveland on Monday. Reports of Young People's work in High River Presbytery show splendid progress.

Floyd Boner of Champion has opened a barber shop in the premises used sometime ago as a doctor's office. Mr. and Mrs. Boner and son will live in the apartment above the shop.

The dance in the Community hall in aid of the hospital fund, held on Dec. 1st, was very successful with an almost record-breaking crowd. The music was provided by Cy. Hopkin's orchestra.

The North Priscilla club will pack their hamper of poultry and farm produce which they donate annually to Wood's Christian Home in Calgary, on Wednesday, December 15th, at the home of Mrs. F. Hauser.

Mrs. W. Ponecek and Miss J. Ponecek left last week for Calgary, where they will spend the winter. Miss Ponecek underwent an operation in the Holy Cross hospital on Monday and at present is doing nicely. Dr. Bouck, assisted by Dr. Dimock, performed the operation.

In the draw for the two turkeys, the lucky ticket holders were Bob McKay of Vinton and H. H. McKee of Ponce. Siding. Tickets were sold by local members of the Canadian Legion and the proceeds of $15.80 were donated to the hospital fund.

The annual bazaar and bazaar sale by the Ladies' Aid of the United church was held last Saturday afternoon in the room, the proceeds amounting to $50. Mrs. Ed. Gibbie, Mrs. A. Lawrence, Mrs. Vilas Tesley and Mrs. D. H. Russell were in charge of the tea room, while the apron booth was looked after by Mrs. Roy Craig and Mrs. Lorne Rommole. Mrs. Louis Rommole and Mrs. L. McGinnis were at the candy table and Mrs. C. W. Folk and Mrs. Jack Taylor had charge of the fish pond.

Mrs. W. J. Madden died at her home in Los Angeles, the latter part of October, the result of a fall when she struck her head and did not regain consciousness. Mrs. Madden was a former resident of this district, coming here with her husband in 1905 to live on their homestead five miles west of town. About ten years ago they left to make their home in Los Angeles. Mrs. Madden survives her; also a daughter and son, both married and living in Los Angeles.

GASOLINE TAX EASY MONEY

In the 18 year period since the gasoline tax was first levied, governments have accumulated a unique variety of reasons for jumping it to its present levels.

In 1919 it was imposed by North Dakota, New Mexico, Colorado, and Oregon. All four states adopted it for the logical purpose of constructing highways and maintaining them. On this ground there never was any great objection.

Since then government ingenuity has gone to absurd limits in proposing other reasons, some of which have necessarily increased the price to the consumer. The tax has been variously classified as an excise, a commercial charge for the privilege of using vehicles on the public roads, a license tax, and sometimes an occupation or privilege tax.

The simple truth is that gasoline has been an easy mark for revenue purposes and the tax on it has shown a steady increase. Were the taxing jurisdictions frank about it, they would admit this was the reason which appeals to them most. It is easy to collect and it brings in big returns.

As late as 1922 the rate in 17 of the United States was only one cent a gallon, only two charging as much as 2 cents. Now 7 cents is fair average. In three provinces of Canada it is 8 cents. In four others it is 7 cents. Only in two, Ontario and Quebec is it as low as 6 cents. Art. B24

CARMANGAY

To raise funds to carry on their winter activities, the C. G. I. T. under the leadership of Miss Margaret Smith, held a very interesting concert, and lantern slide exhibit last week. The lantern slides which were obtained from the Department of Extension, University of Alberta, in Edmonton, were shown by Art. Smith with the accompanying reading by Miss Smith. Coronation ceremonies of various British Sovereigns from William the Conqueror to the recent crowning of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were portrayed, as well as special pictures of the Royal Family and Westminster Abbey. The singing of "God Save the King" concluded this portion of the program. The girls then presented a program of action songs, tap dances and a complete scene, concluding the entertainment with the singing of "Taps" by the members, with the audience standing.
